Samuel's thoughts about gaming:

In my mind, gaming is way to connect with other people, relax or compare skills with others but also getting new skills like faster reflexes, or better 3D imagination. But gaming is much more. Thousands of work places have been made across the world because of gaming. It created a lot of job opportunities, and it is still in rising bussiness stage. Gaming can find you new friends all over the world. But like everything, a lot of playing time can make you some health problems, so it's not good to play 24/7.

The gaming has long history and started in times when people found things that entertain and socialize them. From that point games were evolving into better, more complicated and more challenging. But in the last 50 years, games changed, a lot. New games were made and people could play games on PC. But thing that connected us to the world was Internet. Internet opened opportunities to play with someone on the other side of the globe. And that changed everything.

In my opinion future of gaming will be very interesting. With new VR sets and connecting to people's mind we might get into virtual worlds which will be same as our world. It might be good but I think in my lifetime I won't be able to try it.
